Research posts

Head of Research Projects “Constructing Professional Identities and Comprehensive Learning Pathways in Clinical Practice (CLIP)” and “Continuous Learning in Clinical Nursing” (MINERVA)

2016-2029 Shared leadership with Sine Lehn

In this project, we follow the clinical learning processes of a group of nursing students from the start of their education until they have been working for ten years. The project has received DKK 4 360 000 in external funding. Methodologically, the project is multi-sited, exploratory and empirical, and analytically innovative by including actors with different functions in the co-creative scientific process. The interim results have been published at international conferences, in high-ranking journals and in research reports. With regard to the development of learning spaces for welfare professions in the field of health, we have been used as presenters and are on various steering committees.

Leading Researcher in NorDigHealth (Interregional/EU project).

January 2019-December 2020. With Anne Liveng (who has taken over the leading role) and Barbara Ann Barrett (postdoc).

In collaboration with researchers from Zealand University Hospital, Lübeck and Roskilde University, private companies and others. The aim is to improve health and prevent disease through the use of new digital technology. Roskilde University has been responsible for qualitative research.

Coordinator of the “Research Network for Society and Psychosocial Problems”

2015 to date. With Trine Wulf-Andersen

Network for researchers in the human and social sciences in the fields of mental health, well-being, psychosocial vulnerability, recovery and psychiatric practice. Dialogue-based seminars are held every semester with national and international researchers, practitioners and users.
