Educational background

- 2005 - 2009      PhD in International Development Studies at Roskilde University (also attached to the Danish Institute for International Studies). Thesis title: Labour Agency and Private Social Standards in the Cut Flower Industry.
- 1998 – 2003      Masters Degree in International Development and Geography at Roskilde University. Title of Dissertation: Labour rights and transnational companies in the banana sector in Latin America.
- 1994 – 1998      Bachelor in Science of Religion with a minor degree in Psychology from Copenhagen University

Research Projects

- 2013 - 2015      'Multi-stakeholder initiatives in the Cotton Value Chains of South Asia'. The project is financed by The Danish Council for Independent Research. The overall objective of this research project is to analyze (i) how multi-stakeholder initiatives (MSI) for sustainable cotton production are formulated, implemented, and monitored in the cotton value chains of South Asia; and (ii) whether the processes through which MSIs are institutionalized in South Asia make any difference to the income, work, and environmental conditions of cotton farmers and on-farm workers in this region. The research project is being undertaken in collaboration with Peter Lund Thomsen (Associate Professor of CSR in developing countries at Copenhagen Business School), Neil Coe (Professor of Economic Geography and Head of the Geography Department at the National University of Singapore), and Sukhpal Singh (Professor and Chairperson at the Centre for Management in Agriculture at the Indian Management Institute in Ahmedabad).
- 2010 - present      'Minimizing the exclusionary effects of standards. What works?' financed by the Danish Ministry of Foreign Affairs Development Research Committee. The research has two thematic focuses. One concerns the extent to which new generations of standards and auditing, influenced by development methodologies such as Participatory Rural Appraisals, have had more success than earlier ones in mitigating the possible exclusionary effects (on Southern producers and workers) of standards in global agro-food value chains. The other concerns the extent to which new more sophisticated and/or civic labour control systems are emerging in large-scale agriculture in East Africa and the possible drivers of such changes in line with both new competitive and ethical pressures, as well as changes in production systems. The second of these concerns is being pursued together with Peter Gibbon (senior researcher at the Danish Institute for International Studies).
- 2005 - 2009      'Labour Agency and Private Social Standards in the Cut Flower Industry'. PhD research financed by the Danish Ministry of Foreign Affairs Development Research Committee. The thesis explored the possibilities that private social standards open up for labour organisations to improve work conditions in the South using case studies from the global value chain for cut flowers.
